While I realize that the importance of the Microsoft case degraded significantly after Sept. 11, the Justice Department's settlement is a grave disservice to the American people. The fact that Windows XP continues the practices found to be illegal in a court of law, and that Microsoft is now set to dominate the home console gaming market should have been enough evidence that Microsoft needs tough love.

I'm all for smaller government, but that does not mean allowing one company to have a stranglehold on the future of an entire generation!

Sincerely,

lane
